THE GREAT NAVAL REVIEW

The Herald Correspondent on Board the Wabash.

PREPARATORY TO THE EVOLUTIONS

ON BOARD U. S. FLAGSHIP WABASH. } FLORIDA BAY, near Cape Roman, Feb. 6, 1874. } "How shall I begin to describe the first two days" all from Key West?' I asked of one of the wardroom mess as we sat on the gun deck, enjoying

"That is a part of your professional duties which I could never clearly comprehend. I never could write when there was nothing to say," he replied. "Rut." said I, "the readers of the HERATE de mand to have their thirst for a knowledge of naval tactics satisfied from day to day, and if you have ever catered to the demands of a clamorous public you will appreciate the delicacy of my situation. Come, now, give me the nautical cue and I can go ahead easily enough. A utile of the technicalities wouldn't be bad." . "Well, if I were to describe it I would say that at daylight on Tuesday (February 3) the fleet 'up anchor.' The vessels were then ordered to sail in column at six knots; but, as the Shenandoah couldn't make that time, she fell out of the line until the firemen had been wakened and the steam raised so that she could retake her position. Thus they proceeded all day; with the Congress leading and the Frankila bringing up the rear. Ocasionally there would be every indication of a collision between two of the vessels; but the 'speed ball' at the head of the mizzenmast would indicate a 'slowing down' along the line, and all fears would soon be dissipated. Late in the afternoon the walls of Fort Jefferson came in sight. The vessels were then signalled, 'Forward, into line, left oblique.' They all started to execute the movement, but a few 'busted' in it. Then we an chored over night. At a reasonable hour yesterday morning we got under way, and having passed inside the line of keys terminated by Garden Key, on which stands Tortugas Lighthouse, the signal 'By vessel right' was given, when all the ships turned towards the eastward and headed for Florida Bay, where, after an uneventful voyage, we arrived safely." (Cries of "Burke! burke!" from a dozen throats, conveying to the most casual listener the insinuation that this expression had been generally heard by the mess on some previous occasion.) "And here we are," concluded the maker of history with the utmost equanimity, after the interruption had

THE SCENE OF THE SPECTACLE. We are now upon the bay, in which all the exercises will be conducted. Fiorida Bay is formed by the long line of reefs and sandbars running out from Cape Florida. It is a very sheltered piece of water, protected by the mainland on the north and the ledge of coral rock on the south and east. From Cape Roman on the north to the keys on the south is about seventy-five miles, while the whole of the Gulf Mexico opens up before us to the westward. This bay, as thus considered, includes Ponce de Leon Bay, and is much larger than indicated on the maps under that name. As I write the gradual swell of the great Gulf comes sweeping in upon us like that from the ocean. The Wabash rides the billows as firmly as a church stands, and we do not feel any motion worth men tioning. Aside from the weekly trip of a despatch boat to semi-weekly market boat, we have no communica tion whatever with the outside world. The week's news is an unsealed book to us until Saturday brings us our files of the HERALD. A naval mind will grass the situation without a moment's reflection. In daylight not a cocoanut tree in sight; at night not a light above the horizon. We are in that great, untravelled and unvisited Waste of waters where sailors are lost and the lead and line is the best pilot. Water everywhere, but not a drop to drink! What is more tantalizing yet, the growth of sharks is most flourishing, and to take advantage of the warm temperature of the Guif water to bathe would be to cancel your claim to payment on your insurance policy. A Key West jury even would call it suicide.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH IT? This vast tract of water scenery without any thing, save the manœuvres of the vessels upon its surface to break its monotony, is what we are to enjoy for several weeks to come. Every one who reads this will realize what a delightfully easy (?) time everybody is to have. We will all be forced to learn the principles of naval warfare, whether desirable or not, for study of any kind is certainly Every degree of interest and importance that can possibly attach to manœuvres of this kind will develop itself in this great aquatic spectacle. To those of us who have never seen fourteen men-ofwar in battle array, where there is no enemy, this will be an occasion long to be remembered. If I were to say this at the wardroom table I fear that the general expression of opinion would not coincide with the enthusiasm which I have so boldly

WHAT YOUR CORRESPONDENT WILL DO. How five weeks can be occupied in fleet drill cannot comprehend; but it is one of those things which, doubtiess, will become more familiar as I grow older. I shall let events take their course. It is a principle in naval discipline that when the officer of the deck cannot decide what to do in a moment of vital importance, he should let things take their course rather than make a fatally wrong move. I have this great drill (do I hear cries of "Burke ?") on my hands, and I must "take it all in." I have begun a faithful study of the text books on fleet evolutions, and, by the end of the spectacle, will be in a condition to write intelligently regarding this bugbear of "the Western members"-the naval movements in the

THE BALL OPENED. The first day's regular evolutions will take place to-day. I regret exceedingly that the mailboat goes so early this morning that I cannot include an account of this day's manœuvres. The general plan which I sketched out some days ago will be adhered to closely. A general drill to test the speed and capabilities of the vessels of each division will follow for a few days. Then the divisions will be exercised separately, after which will follow the great variety of entertainments before spoken of, in the shape of target practice, torpedo firing, &c. Before dismissing this subject I desire to refer to the sailing under steam which has taken place during the last two days and to remark that the Wabash, an auxiliary steam vessel, was the only one which was able to maintain the old rate of speed.

"OUR MESS."
The wardroom mess on the Wabash has one charming peculiarity which I wish to embalm along with the history of this great naval review. Neither collectively nor singly will its members tolerate an old joke. The summary way which they have of disposing of all such inflictions deserves careful study by the outside world. Whether who outwitted the Pope, or to some lesser light, I have not dared to inquire for fear of having his name hurled at my poor inquisitive head. I believe he was some fellow who told old jokes. Suffice it to say the utterance of the magic word at the dinner table has the effect of uniting all conversation (which may have diverged into just twenty different topics) upon the comparative merits of "Pommery and Greno" or "Roederer." . The men are just called to quarters, so I

The waters near here having been declared to be unsuitable for fleet evolutions by both Admiral Case and Commodore Parker, the fleet will leave to-morrow for the Gulf of Florida, just below Cape Romain. The Gulf Stream and the numerous lumps of sandbar in the vicinity of Tortugas are the cause of this decision. The squadron evolutions will scarcely begin before the end of this week.

THE FALLEN BREWERY.

Heartrending Scenes-Bodies Brought Out Crushed and Mangled-Eleven Men Killed and Eleven Injured-The Complete List.

PHILADELPHIA, Peb. 14, 1874. The work of excavating the ruins of the brewery which yesterday tell in this city is yet going on and new bodies are hourly being taken out, some dead and others frightfully crushed and mangled The number of parties at first reported as having been in the building when it fell was sixteen, but twenty-two have been dug out, while two known parties are still missing. The scene of the wreck is terrible, indeed, and the work of excavation is very slow and painful.

John Shaw, who resides at No. 2,012 Berks street, was found wedged in a mass of timber, part of the heaviest of which had crushed both his legs. He was alive and conscious; but, while talking with his acquaintances his agony was excruciating. It took three hours to dig him out, and during that time stimulants were freely administered. After the poor man was exhumed it was found that both legs were broken, while he was bleeding from severe internal injuries.

Two unfortunates, named Henry Starr and -Kelley, were found in a pool of blood, fearfully mangled with the ice and timber, stark, cold and dead. Near these two reposed simply a mass of quivering, bleeding flesh, crushed so terribly as to bear ing, bleeding flesh, crushed so terribly as to bear no resemblance to a man, and who, up to this hour, has not been recognized. The search continued all last night, several others being found dead and fearituly mangled.

One (John Murphy) was found still alive and taken to a bospital. Three other men upon the payroli were still missing, and the rescuers worked all night despite the heavy storm that was raging.

ONE OF THE SADDEST AFFAIRS that ever came under the notice of your correspondent is the following in relation to a young German named Wurster, who appeared at the scene of the disaster early yesterday morning, and who worked heroically all day long to relieve the sufferings of the poor victims lying under the heavy burden. He did not stop, even to take lood, and worked like a hero and christian from morning until night. He rescued one man after cutting for three hours directly over his body with a hatchet, and at nightful paused for a moment to rest. His strenuous exertions had greatly wearled him and alias in descending from the ment to rest. His strenuous exertions had greatly wearied him, and, alas, in descending from the ruins he made a false step, his equilibrium was lost, and he fell head foremost from an elevation of thirty feet, crushing his body to jelly and bringing instant death.

I give below a complete list of those who were killed, with such additional information as it has been possible to obtain since writing the foregoing.

Albert Johns, aged twelve years and six months. He had been driving one of the ice carts and was inside of the building when it fell. His body was found buried in mait, in which he had been smothered, with a broken staircase lying upon it. The remains of the unfortunate lad were discovered by his own father, who led one of the corps of rescuers.

Four unknown men, crushed and lifeless, were recovered up to nine o'clock last night. One of these men is supposed to be William Hopping, who was yesterday missing. His face is beyond recognition. He was a new man, his name having only been placed on the payroll yesterday morning. George Worth, a carpenter, living in the neighborhood, was instantly killed by failing into a deep pit in going from the scene of the disaster. He came early to the scene and worked with unfagging zeal to rescue the dead and save the living. In company with Officers Carriery and John Stenson, of the Twenty-third district, he left the place at nine o'clock last night, and had hardly proceeded a hundred teet when the three were precipitated into a

This morning the bodies of Jacob Limbach and Otto Schubert were recovered.
Thus far it is known that eleven men have been killed and their bodies taken to the Morgue.

street, seriously injured by lailing into a new beer vault.

The affair has caused universal norror, and the details of the accident, the condition of the mangled corpses, and the agonies of the wounded and dying are too terrible to be described.

Building Inspector Robert Bowers made an examination of the ruins this morning, and discovered that three of the pillars had been forced through the crown of the arch into the cellar. The theory of this gentleman is that the immense weight forced these pillars through the arch, which spread the walls, causing them to fail.

The brewery was erected at a cost of about $50,000. There were about 2,000 barrels of beer in the vats, valued at about $15,000, all of which was lost. There was also a large quantity of valuable machinery, turnaces, kettles, hoisting apparatus, mait, hops, &c., in the ruined building, and the pecuniary loss will amount to the neighborhood of $100,000.

THE RUM CRUSADE.

Governor Allen on the Ohio Agitation.

WOMAN'S DISINTERESTED INFLUENCE

Whiskey Dealers and Topers Shown No Quarter.

COLUMBUS, Obto, Feb. 14, 1874. Your correspondent has had the pleasure of a private interview with Governor Alien, the Execu-tive of the State, on the subject that is now so largely agitating the public mind. His views may be substantially presented as follows:-

GOVERNOR ALLEN ON THE TEMPERANCE CRUSADE "I look upon the movement," remarked the Governor, "as only another proof that the public mind is always subject to the same oscillation that individual minds are, and think that this particular excitement is abnormal, and, therefore, temporary."

"But is it not extending?" "So it will extend and continue to extend until, after a while, it will spend itself and a reaction set in. The ladies are right in this. Their innuence is the only force which can have any real and lasting influence in checking the rulnous tendento intoxication. I believe and always have believed that the ladies alone can accomplish this great object. When men become mixed up with it they are sure to have some ulterior and selfish purpose in view, and consequently the movement will lose its force. The women are always moved by an unmixed desire to accomplish good, and that desire remains effective until men, with their mixed and sordid motives, interpose to take the lead. All influence which seeks to correct bad habits in man, such as exces sive drinking, must be moral influences, and in the exercise of these influences the ladies will necessarily exert the greatest power. All positive power of government and law has in all times and countries been proved by experience insufficient to control men in matters of habits and manners In these particulars the moral force of public sentiment, usually called public opinion, is alone found ment, usually called public opinion, is alone found to be efficient. There is no likelihood of the Legislature taking any action on the subject. Whiskey drinking cannot be abolished by law. You may pass all the laws you please on the subject, and you will only sharpen the invention of the fellows who sell. The vote of the prohibitionists, some 10,000 in this State, might as well have been thrown into a waste basket.

This thing of praying around salons is being carried to excess. When an epidemic comes along it very frequently embraces the finest persons and the finest physical organizations; hence the fact that the movement is being carried on by ladies of the first respectability should create no surprise. I believe the whole excitement to be of an ephemeral character and that it will in a short time subside."

short time subside."

The Governor spoke quite deliberately, and his words as he uttered them seemed as it he were presenting, in his brief and terse style, a special message to the Logislature on the subject.

MME BROWN INTERVIEWED.

Immediately after his interview with the Gov-

Immediately after his interview with the Governor, your correspondent was introduced, in the pariors of the Neil House, to Mine. Mattle McC. Brown, chief or the Grand High Priesess of the Independent Order of Good Tempiars in this State. I was informed by this lady that the Order is making great progress, not only in this country but in Great Britain. Of course the Good Tempiars will take advantage of the present temperance agitation to make permanent proselytes to the cause. Mine. Brown is now engaged in delivering a course of lectures in different parts of the State, and would have delivered one in the town of Republic to-night, had not sudden indisposition prevented her. I am informed by Mine. Brown that Lady Ogle, of Brighton, England, is Worthy Chief Tempiar of a subordinate lodge of Good Tempiars in England, also that Joseph Madins, as Grand Worthy Chief Tempiar of England, is making himself a history, which will be the rival of that of Premier Gladstone; that John Pepper, Grand Worthy Chief Tempiar of Ireland, and John Simms, Grand Worthy Counsellor, are doing a like work of reformation for that island.

THE COMING CONVULSION.

When all the temperance posts get to work here there will be a grand upheaval of the knights of the keg in this State. You may rely upon that and yet some of them begin to show fight. In Springfield, this morning, there was a report that all the saloons had closed. This was soon ascertained to be a wholesale and retail fabrication. Again it was reported that a notorious saloon keeper on High street, George Miller by name, had resolved to empty his whiskey in the streets. You never saw a much more indignant individual than Miller when your correspondent asked him if the report was true.

"No! it's all a lie. I ain't got to whiskey in the streets to sell. In My whould I make such a Miller when your correspondent asked him if the report was true.

"No! it's all a lie. I ain't got no whiskey in the first place, to sell, and why should I make such a fool of myself as to throw it into the street if I had? The whole story amounts to this:—Some-body—mentioning a name—had asked me if I was going to throw any liquor into the street. I told him 'No.' He said, 'I better had.'"

Here Miller's lips became livid and his eyes flashed with angry fire.

"They want to use force with me, do they? I'd like to see them; I'd blow them to hell in a min-like to see them; I'd blow them to hell in a minute."

The ladies made no public demonstration in Springfield to day. They had their usual prayer meeting in the Methodist Episcopal church and arrangements were made for further outside seizure on Monday.

Dio Lewis and Van Peit have been speaking in Springfield, but they both left to-day for other fields of usefulness. The liquor dealers in Springfield are preparing to organize for defensive operations. As yet not one has relented or been converted, nor can I find that any have shown signs of a contrite spirit.

LEADING FEMALE WARRIORS IN SPRINGFIELD.

A remarkable oid lady—Mrs. Stewart—is the leader of the movement in Springfied, and everybody respects her for the earnestness with which she enters into the work. She watted upon Nullist, of the Lagonda House bar, termed the "Wickedest man in Springfield," but failed to make an impression. Besides Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Henry and Mrs. Teegarden are notable for their zeal in the cause.

Yesterday the ladles waited upon a number of the dealers. One of them forbade their entering his saloon and closed the doors upon them. They then commenced praying on the sidewalk. In the course of her prayers Mrs. Henry prayed that the Lord would not shut the doors of Heaven against those who had shut their doors of Heaven against those who had shut their doors dealers. God's children, who were endeavoring to do good. The heart of the dramseller was touched, and his doors were opened. The prayers are all extemporaneous, and are, in some cases, marvels of impressive eloquence, as if there were really some neavenly inspiration in their utterances.

The movement has met with marked success in Xenia, Osborn and other places in this vicinity, and, despite the money-making features imparted to they a few male leaders, seems still destined to have a long run.

Postal Addresses to the Dealers in "Ardents."

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Feb. 14, 1874. One hundred and fifty postal cards were mailed tarough the Covington, Ky., Post Office to-day to saloon keepers, which read as follows:-

DEAR SIR—You are requested and entreated to abandon the sale of intoxicating liquors, for your own welfare and that of humanity. Remember that it is degrading to yourself and spreads vice and poverty among us. If you do not do this we will nnite our prayers and visit you and every saloon in a body, fervently pleading until our object is attained.

THE LADIES' COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

It is reported that the Covington ladies will commence moving next Wednesday. The sale of liquors in Covington is licensed by both the city and the State.

There is nothing new in reference to the situation in Ohio, except that the movement is taking hold of small villages.

Two Hundred Fighters at Jeffersonville. The action taken by the women of this place for the suppression of the liquor traffic was fully ed to-day. The organization, composed of developed to-day. The organization, composed of about 200 ladies, met at the Methodist church, and, after the preliminary arrangements marched quietly to the most prominent saloons.

At the first saloon they were remised admittance and services were held on the pavement. At two other saloons visited they were invited in and the proprietors agreed to quit the business if bought out. An immense crowd congregated and driuking continued during the services. The ladies will make another offensive demonstration on Monday.

Cardinal Tarquini.

His Eminence Cardinal Camillo Tarquini, who was prostrated by a severe attack of filmess on the 11th inst., died during the night of riday last, 13th inst. He was born at Marta, Montesfiacone, Centrai Italy, on the 27th of September, in the year 1810, and elevated to the dignity of the Cardinalate by the Pope on the 16th of January, in the present year. Cardinal Tarquini was an eminent and most humble Father of the Order of Jesuits, and obeyed, rather than invited the Jesults, and obeyed, rather than invited the honor which was conferred on him by the Sovereign Pontiff. When the special courier from Rome waited on him to announce the news of his accession to the dignity he found him engaged in washing the altar linen of his church. The Jesuits have counted but few Cardinais among their Order—a necessary result of the express yow which they make not to accept any ecclesiastical dignity unless when constrained to do so by formal precept and under pain of sin, and of their unfailing efforts to preserve in its full force this most important enactment of their constitution. Nor have the Sovereign Pontiffs been forward in imposing upon members of the society the obligation of accepting such dignities, and whenever they have found themselves constrained by some general or special need of the Church to depart from their general practice. It was under the induence of such a motive that Clement VIII, raised Francesco Toledo and the venerable Robert Bellarmine to Cardinalitial honors; and so it was with the promotion of Govanni John de Lugo and of Pazman, the Primate of Hungary, by Urban VIII.; of Storza, by Alexander VIII.; of Cardinal Casmir of Poland, by Innocent X.; of John Baptist Salerno and Alvaro Clentuegos, by Clement X., and, last of ali, with that of Cardinal Camilio Tarquini by the Holy Father Plus IX. honor which was conferred on him by the Sover-

Theo. Derringer. A telegram from Philadelphia, under date of the 14th inst., reports:-"Theo. Derringer died this morning. He was one of the hiers interested in the coal lands suits, one of which was recently de-cided at Wilkesbarre in favor of the Derringer iam-ily and against the heirs of Teuck Coxe.

A telegram from London, under date of yesterday, 14th inst., announces the death of the wife of James Anthony Froude, the historian.

NOBLE-HEARTED PILOTS. Timely Succor of the Crew of a Yacht by Pilot Boat No. 21. TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD :-I desire, through your paper, to thank three brave men for a noble act, in saving two lives when all seemed lost-viz., pilots Charles Cummiskey, John Shorks and William Germond, of pilot boat William H. Aspinwall, No. 21, for the prompt and timely aid given to me when in my yacht Anita, of Gravesend. I had been driven to sea about forty-five miles from Barnegat, and had sea about forty-five miles from Barnegat, and had been for over twenty-four hours completely at the mercy of the storm, having been caught in the squall on Saturday evening and picked up by them on Sunday anternoon. These men not only saved our lives, towed the yacht salely into harbor at Jones' Inlet, stayed by her all night, pumped her out dry, cleared the sails of ice, but also shared with us the comforts of their cabin and banks give has deposited and characteristics. ounks, gave us a dry outfit and cheered us with every comfort in their power; moreover, positively retusing any pay or even a hint of reward, though they had, to aid us, run out of their course over 100 miles and lost over twelve hours of cruising time. miles and lost over twelve hours of cruising time. Pilots are proverbially generous and full of sympathy for the weary and frozen "toilers of the sea;" but these three men-words cannot thank them enough. If medals are given for such acts—the saving of two lives—I say, if ever deserved by men, these men ought to have one. At least let 12 be known to the public where three men who are worthy of the name can be found. Respectfully, FREDERICK MONTGOMERY.
